The message of Easter is a joyful one. It is the story of people who had come to grieve at a tomb, but who found it empty, guarded by an angel who told them, "Fear not, He is not here--and they left it These words hold the wonderful message of Easter"Fear not. . .great joy." If these could be put into pill form they would cure every fear complex, frustration, anxiety, neurosis, occupational fatigue and maladjustment that man has brought upon himself.

No tomb despondency can hold our faith and hope and dreams if we remember that life itself is a miracle, given to us as a precious possession, and that the way we use it is up to us. It was meant to be lived joyfully, with trust and confidence that if we give the best that is in us, we will receive the best that life has to offer. If we learn to "listen with love and faith," there can be no "night of death" that we need to fear. Our belief that all things good will live, the triumph of courage over doubt, the determination to make our lives worth living--that is Easter. Why did you spend all your money for that car that wouldn't run? Why did you watch TV instead of doing your homework? Why did you gossip about someone? How many of these questions and many more like them have we answered with "It seemed like a good idea at the time" and then later realized it wasn't such a good idea? Don't we often only see what is to be gained immediately and try to give ourselves instant happiness rather than denying ourselves some frivolous pleasure that will actually prevent long-lasting hap-piness and success? A good formula to decide what we should do might be to ask ourselves "In the long run, is
